Stops Tobacco Habit in One Day

Sanitarium Publishes Free Book Showing How Tobacco Habit Can Be Banished in From One to Five Days at Home

The Elders Sanitarium located at 853 Main St., St. Joseph, Mo., has published a free book showing the deadly effect of the tobacco habit, and how it can be banished in from one to five days at home.

Men who have used tobacco for more than fifty years have tried this method and say it is entirely successful, and in addition has improved their health wonderfully. This method banishes the desire for tobacco, no matter whether it is smoking, chewing, cigarettes or snuff dipping.

Is this book to be distributed free, anyone wanting a copy should send their name and address at once.

IN DEATH'S SHADOW FRANK PLEADS AGAIN FOR "SQUARE DEAL"

You know, it was because it was feared that it would then and there be repudiated as it has now been. In any other reason possibly in the light of the recent revelation?

Why is Conley kept concealed from every person desirous of learning the truth? Why now, when he has had a sentence to punish, which he admits, is a new trial applied for? Simply to keep him out of sight of anyone but those who trained him until now you read this book.

I believe that I am entitled to a trial, a fair trial, and that you who read this book think who have the right to pass on it, and I believe that I will get it. I am not pleading for my life. I am asking for a fair, square deal, with naught extenuated and naught set down in malice.

New Frank Evidence

DEFENSE OF FRANK HAS NEW EVIDENCE TO CLEAR UP CASE

Cotton states that the evidence in the pencil factory's order No. 1913 has been found. It bears the date of September 16, 1909, showing that the goods ordered on that date were for two pieces of machine steel of a type used by Becker.

BLANKS CARRIED TO BARNETT. Mr. Alexander states that Becker's office was the fourth floor of the factory and was conducted as a department entirely separate from the basement.

When Becker left the factory in December, 1912, according to Mr. Alexander, the old papers left in his office were carried down to the basement. He points out that it is extremely improbable, in view of these circumstances, that such a blank could have been in Frank's office.

Frank testified that Frank reached over from his desk on the second floor where he was sitting at the time he wrote the note. He described the paper as "green." The paper was said to be in the desk, Conley asserted, and did not go out to get it.

"It is more probable," says Mr. Alexander, "than that the paper was found in the basement, and it is highly improbable that it could have been found in the basement."

Attorneys for Frank refuse to discuss the contemplated motion for a new trial when it is in the hands of the judge, but they are confident that they will be able to present evidence to the jury that will show that the goods ordered on that date were for two pieces of machine steel of a type used by Becker.

MRS. CRAWFORD IS WINNER IN CONTEST ON HUSBAND'S WILL

The will was returned to the widow. The auditor takes occasion to call attention to the waste of time involved when he says that the estate of Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford is entirely without foundation, that she was a lawbreaker, holding woman previous to her marriage to Joshua B. Crawford.

The auditor holds that property on West Fourteenth street, claimed by C. Z. Crawford, is part of the estate of Joshua B. Crawford and consequently the estate of Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, the north side of Fourteenth street claimed by Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, the estate of Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, consequently inherited by Joshua B. Crawford and reverting to his widow, that the property claimed by Mattie T. Howard is not hers but part of Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford's estate; that Tallulah Miller is not a rightful heir, that part of the estate of Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, that Nancy B. Crawford's estate claimed by him and other heirs.

In his findings on the allegations of the contesting heirs the auditor states: That Joshua B. Crawford was of sound mind and fully capable of contracting marriage at the time of his alleged marriage with Mary Belle Crawford.

That he was not a drunkard at that time of had never been a drunkard or was then drunk or in the slightest degree incapacitated by alcoholic liquors or drugs from entering into contract of marriage.

That he was lawfully married on March 2, 1909, with the full knowledge and comprehension of the responsibilities pertaining thereto.

That Mary Belle Crawford did not fraudulently induce Joshua B. Crawford to enter into the marriage contract or use any artifice to persuade him to do so.

That the marriage was performed by a lawfully ordained minister.

That Mary Belle Crawford had been a lawfully married woman prior to her first husband, and that even had she not been, the fact that she had been married prior to her marriage to Joshua B. Crawford would render her marriage to him void.

That Mary Belle Crawford was lawfully divorced from her first husband, Charles R. McClinton.

That the will of Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, Joshua B. Crawford's first wife, leaving her estate to Joshua B. Crawford, was valid.

That although Joshua B. Crawford died intestate, his widow, Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, was his sole and lawful heir.

That Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, acting as joint administratrix, had made fair and valid settlements with the legatees.

In remarking on the claims of the defense that Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford poisoned her husband, Auditor Anderson says: That the evidence against her fails to make the slightest reasonable suspicion of her guilt, and that she murdered her husband or that she murdered him in order to acquire his property.

He says further: "The great weight of evidence convinces the auditor that plaintiffs' assertions on the character of Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford is entirely without foundation, that she was a lawbreaker, holding woman previous to her marriage to Joshua B. Crawford.

The auditor holds that property on West Fourteenth street, claimed by C. Z. Crawford, is part of the estate of Joshua B. Crawford and consequently the estate of Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, the north side of Fourteenth street claimed by Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, the estate of Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, consequently inherited by Joshua B. 17 MEN PICKED UP ADRIFT AT SEA IN FRAIL LIFEBOAT IN BLINDING SNOWSTORM water into their little craft almost as fast as it could be bailed out, the men decided to drift and depend on being picked up.

DRIFTED WITH DEATH.
They huddled together, so benumbed and waterlogged that they hardly cared toward the last whether death came or not. It was 8 o'clock and snowing fast.

In explaining the foundering of the Charleston, Captain Simmons said that her bottom seams, the result of being hit and about 7 a. m. Friday water poured in at such a rate that two hours later the ship was filled to the gunwales. He and his men barely had time to get in the only two small boats the steamer carried before she plunged to the bottom.

First Mate Thompson and three men took to the small boat and were picked up by the lifeboat. The other two boats were picked up by the Southern Steamship company's steamer, the Charleston, on the morning of the 10th.

CAPTAIN'S STORY.
Sixpence, Mr. J. M. Captain H. C. Simmons declared his and sixteen members of his crew spent seven hours in a twenty-foot boat with sea and wind coming over them and a blinding snow storm. The boat was being overtaken by passing ships. He said the Tower broke in the night.

He said the old Dominion steamer Hamilton passed them, but saw no signals on the ship. "We used a coat tied to an oar as a signal," he said. "The ship came towards us and we were rescued."

WARE & HARPER,
 124-125 ATLANTA NATIONAL BANK BLDG.
 ATLANTA, GA.
 S. C. Giese & R. D. Harper.

550 FRONT FOOT—Ponce de Leon ave., 50x220 feet, east front, one of the most desirable lots on this popular and growing thoroughfare.

$10,000—Brick store, north side, on lot 1222 105, now rented for $20 monthly; room for other buildings. This is a "ketch."

$12,000—Large 1 1/2 mile circle, on north side of corner, 17 feet front, with a building on it renting for $100 per month and growing in value daily; $5,000 cash.

BRICK STORE—Corner lot, rent for $50 per month, new, electricity and all modern improvements. There is a lease of $4.00. This will pay 14 PER CENT after taking out the state, county and city taxes and paying interest on loan. What more do you want? $8,000.

61 LOTS and 2 6-room up-to-date cottages, with cost $2,000 each to build, now being sold for $3,000 each. This leaves the lot for $8,000 or a lot of $10,000. The lots have been graded, a first-class white building, where prices are growing in value daily. These lots can be sold for $200 each, or as an average financial trouble is only reason for this. If you can raise $100, we can arrange the balance. These lots can be sold under the hammer within the next 3 months and double your money. $15,000.

MARIETTA ST.—Business lot, on the north-east side of Marietta street, opposite the intersection of Bedford avenue. Suitable for a bank, moving picture show (business house). $20,000, with all city and state taxes. A money-maker. $4,000.

NORTH SIDE—High-class corner lot, 100x200, including the best location on the North Side on the market. In the very best and fastest improving section, and on two of the main thoroughfares, "Hot" on the high-class apartments, with 200 feet of street front, and two car lines. Nothing cheaper and nothing with a better future. Call for particulars. $15,000.

WEST NORTH AVE.—Near Spring street, 50x120 to alley. Has 6-room house which will carry interest and taxes until you are ready to build a high-class apartment. Lots are sold in this block at $300 per foot. A good buy. $8,000.

STORE LOT—Well located, in business center. 50x150, with alley on side; property all about this selling for $300 per front foot. Every one wants some good store property, and here is your chance to get it at a reasonable price; $1,500 cash, balance can be arranged. If you will look at this you will buy it. $7,000.

$6,000—15-room, two apartments, 8 rooms each, 50x170 to alley, in tip-top condition; rent for $800 yearly; there is a lease of $2,000 at 6 per cent. Will take good lot in part; cash, interest, and good location.

550 FRONT FOOT—Marietta street lot, 50x200 cash. This is a business lot and good two-story brick store and a big bargain.

FOR subdivision, 20 acres, adjoining the city limits of Decatur, Ga.; lies beautifully, has about 1,000,000 feet of frontage, and is sold in this tract at good prices, and if handled properly will take the buyer $50,000. There is not a tract between Atlanta and this tract which can be bought for less than $1,000 per acre. For a quick turn will take $375 per acre and give terms. This is worth your serious consideration.

WARE & HARPER,
 124-125 ATLANTA NATIONAL BANK BLDG.

HOMES ON EASY TERMS

WEST END COTTAGE, 5 rooms, lot 52147, tile sidewalks and all conveniences; convenient to car and public school. This is a bargain at $5,000.00, on terms of $150.00 cash and $120.00 a month. Most people living in West End pay more rent than the mortgage on this place amount to. Why? You can search me!

IN EAST LAKE SECTION, two blocks from 15-minute car service. Avenue cottage, nearly new, on corner lot 100x200 feet. City water not connected, but is available. We forgot to say that the place is located in an exceptionally good neighborhood and that we recommend it as a place that is sure to increase in value. Remember, the lot is 100 feet front and runs back 200 feet. Think of the possibilities in the way of garden, chickens, health, children.

HOW MANUFACTURING HAS MADE RAILROAD FRONTAGE A MOST DESIRABLE ASSET OF ATLANTA REAL ESTATE

Nearly 150 Freight Trains Enter and Leave Atlanta Daily, and Local Manufacturers Supply Markets as Far off as the Pacific Coast-- How the Demand for Railroad Sites Ranges From the Expensive Locations on Main Thoroughfares to the Cheaper Sites

UNKNOWN to the average Atlantian are manufacturing concerns here which send their salesmen to the Pacific coast, where retailers and jobbers use their output. There are manufacturers in Atlanta who supply articles to the big department stores in New York and Chicago. The fact that 140 freight trains go in and out of Atlanta every day is an indication of the position this city occupies as a manufacturing center.

The accompanying illustrations give an idea of the railroad sections of the city, and the diagram, taken from the latest issue of the Atlanta Commercial and Industrial Bulletin, which is issued by the Industrial and Statistical bureau of the chamber of commerce, of which W. H. Leahy is the head, shows the position of Atlanta are in Atlanta and Fulton county 600 manufacturing concerns, with a capital of $55,000,000 and a value of manufactured products of $30,000,000. The government census of 1910 gave Atlanta and Fulton county 548 enterprises, with a capital of $44,000,000, and a value of products of over $42,000,000, so the increase in these items are 52 plants, nearly $11,000,000 in capital, and over $6,000,000 increase of the value of the manufactured products.

INDUSTRIAL TOURS.
A recent industrial tour of Atlanta, inaugurated by the chamber of commerce, opened the eyes of Atlantians to the number of manufacturing plants located on the railroads in and near the city, and the success of that tour has resulted in the determination to they do seek an inexpensive location where their carload shipments can be unloaded or stored.

A conspicuous example of a concern which bought a high-priced location is the automobile company which will erect its great assembly plant on Ponce de Leon avenue and the Southern railway belt line.

The other example is of a concern which bought a cheap lot on the A. B. and A. railroad on the west side, where it has erected oil tanks to receive shipments of gasoline.

There are cases of manufacturing concerns which buy small acreage tracts on the railroad some distance out, so as to be prepared when their

Startling Figures on Manufacturing and How the Railroads Handle the Output. Value of Property at and on the Railroads seventeen miles, and one to Stone Mountain, Ga., a distance of seventeen miles, one of the south's greatest curiosities being the largest mountain of stone in the world.

Atlanta is the headquarters of the most stupendous development of hydro-electric power in operation in the south, with a lower rate on power and light than any of the larger cities in the south.

Atlanta covers thirty square miles of territory and there is an abundance of available properties, both in and outside of the city, in tracts of any size desired, located on railroad frontage or otherwise for manufacturing purposes.

Atlanta is traffic headquarters for Southeastern railroads, the offices of the Southeastern Freight and Passenger associations being located here, for the telephone companies, being headquarters for the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph company, covering North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi, as a distributing point and its easy reach of every other important point in the country.

As real estate is affected by everything else, so is it affected by the railroads and the manufacturing industry, and property with railroad frontage has an added value because where well located as to distance from the city it is becoming scarcer and scarcer as new concerns come here and utilize it.

FREIGHT FIGURES.

The value of railroad frontage in Atlanta is further emphasized by freight statistics compiled by Mr. Leahy's bureau. As previously stated, 140 freight trains a day enter and leave Atlanta. Each of the Atlanta lines operates what is called the package car service, affording local shippers what the carriers term express service at freight rates.

The cars are loaded for certain stations exclusively where the volume of business is sufficient, otherwise they are loaded for a group of stations located within a short distance of each other.

The cars in all cases are handled on fast trains. The A. B. and A. railroad handles 27 such cars; the Atlanta Joint Terminals, 87 cars; the Central of Georgia, 52; the Seaboard Air Line, 27; the Southern railway 191, and the W. and A. N. C. and St. L. 52, making a total of 406.

"In view of the above facts," says the Bulletin, "it is only natural that Atlanta should be and is traffic headquarters for the southeastern freight and passenger associations being located here."

MANUFACTURING.

The Bulletin estimates that there have another like it sometime next month.

The tour embraced a tremendous territory. It embraced all the manufacturing territory at, beyond and this side of East Point; the vast yards around the Terminal Station, the Inman yards and Bellwood yards, all on the west side; the section on the Georgia railroad off Inman Park; the territory around the Atlantic Express, on Edgewood avenue; the region around the Atlanta steel works and at Howell's station; the plants on and near Hunter street and so on.

The tour consumed a whole day, and was an education along the line of Atlanta's industrial development.

CONCERNS LOCATING HERE.
The statistical bureau of the chamber of commerce is in constant communication with concerns seeking locations here, and hardly a day passes but that they receive an inquiry of this kind.

The main thing, of course, is the selection of a site. This site must have railroad frontage, and some concerns are content with being near the railroads. In any event, the railroad Railroad frontage not too far from the center, on a main thoroughfare and with good car service, so that the convenience of employees can be served, is scarce and high priced, and the problem is to find the proper location at the proper price.

Consequently railroad frontage has become an established and desirable commodity of real estate, and will be more and more so as the city grows and its industrial enterprises multiply.

There is a demand for all kinds of frontage. Some concerns do not require the high priced location, but present sites become too high-priced for their needs.

POWER AN ASSET.

The opening of the vast power resources at Tallulah Falls is having a pronounced effect on manufacturing. The company has arrangements with the railroads by which it may erect its pole line along their rights of way, and thus supply manufacturing concerns.

Commenting on the power assets of Atlanta, the Bulletin has this to say: "Manufacturing enterprises looking southward for locations should not overlook the advantages Atlanta has to offer in motive power. It be asserted without fear of successful contradiction that nowhere south of the Ohio river and east of the Mississippi can legitimate power rates for manufacturing be secured lower than those prevailing in Atlanta."

"This fact, which is of course of vital importance to every manufacturer or industrial enterprise using power, is due primarily to the abundance of hydro-electric current generated in this territory, and the natural advantages under which the electric plants are operated. One hydro-electric development alone, within 100 miles of Atlanta, sends 90,000 horse-power into this vicinity, and because the peculiar formation of the river bed in which it is located affords the ideal water power facilities, the cost of manufacturing the current is small enough to permit the operating company to furnish it to consumers at rates rarely obtainable. It is very probable that nowhere in the United States can lower permanent rates than those prevailing in Atlanta be secured for factories."

"With this condition existing, and it can unquestionably be demonstrated to anyone interested in this subject, it behooves the individual or firm seeking location in the southern territory to carefully investigate the subject of motive power rates before a final selection of site is made.

The Industrial and Statistical Bureau of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce will gladly put anyone interested in this matter into communication with the proper authorities for furnishing all the necessary information concerning the rates obtainable here and elsewhere."

ATLANTA FACTS TERSELY TOLD.

By W. H. LEAHY.

W. H. Leahy, formerly a railroad man, and now head of the statistics bureau of the chamber of commerce, has condensed for The Journal some interesting facts about Atlanta as a manufacturing city.

Mr. Leahy is in constant receipt of letters from concerns all over the country which are seeking locations here, and he meets a great many people who come to the city looking over the situation.

The appointment of Mr. Leahy to this position shows what an important feature of the city's industrial life manufacturing has come to be.

Mr. Leahy's figures are as follows: Atlanta is a city of 215,000 population.

Atlanta is the manufacturing and distributing center of the Southeast. Atlanta is within a night's ride of cities on the border of what is known as the Southeastern territory, considering such as bounded on the north by the Ohio and Potomac and on the west by the Mississippi river, the principal cities on the border being Cincinnati, Louisville, Evansville, St. Louis, Memphis, Vicksburg, New Orleans, Mobile, Pensacola, Jacksonville, Brunswick, Savannah, Charleston, Wilmington and Norfolk. Atlanta has 600 manufacturing plants with a capitalization of $55,000,000 and value of manufactured products of $15,000,000.

Atlanta's manufacturing plants produce a more varied line of products than any city in the South.

Atlanta's railroads radiate to every point of the compass, affording unrivaled transportation facilities.

Atlanta enjoys, in addition to the steam railroads, thirty-four miles of interurban railway, one line operating to Marietta, a distance of Louisiana and the southern parts of Indiana and Illinois.

Atlanta was the great strategic point in the closing campaign of the Civil war, the city being the key, so to speak, to the southeastern situation and after the famous Battle of Atlanta, one of the most noted conflicts of the Civil war, General Sherman, without further opposition, proceeded on his famous march to the sea.

Atlanta is the fourth insurance center of the United States.

Atlanta is the second mule market in the world.

Atlanta is the only city between Baltimore and New Orleans which actually sells foreign exchange. Atlanta enjoys the trade of $2,000,000 merchants and in 1912 a general commercial business of $246,000,000.

Dixie's Greatest Dry Cleaner & Dyers

Tomorrow, ONLY $1 puts this NEW HOOSIER in your home on the famous Hoosier Plan.

You may choose between the celebrated "White Beauty," whose picture is shown here, and one of the other Hoosiers, finished inside in oak.

The terms of the Hoosier Plan are these:

1. $1 puts the cabinet you choose in your home.
2. $1 weekly quickly pays for it.
3. The Low Cash Price fixed by the factory prevails strictly.
4. No interest. No extra fees.
5. This sale is under direct supervision of the Hoosier Company.
6. Your money back if you are not delighted with your Hoosier.

Only those women who grasp this opportunity tomorrow can be sure of getting one of these cabinets on this liberal Hoosier Plan. You realize of course that these terms could not be offered except on a very limited number of cabinets. After this sale:

1. The "Hoosier Plan" terms will be withdrawn.
2. Our regular furniture terms will then prevail.

THE IMMEDIATE CLOSING of this sale may be caused tomorrow by the number of women who enroll on this Hoosier Plan. If all the women who need Hoosiers should come tomorrow, our allotment would be taken before night and the sale would close. This has happened in many similar sales throughout the country. On the other hand, if salesmen delay, the sale may last all week. This too has happened. Which now is best for you—to delay and take the chances of missing this opportunity or to come down tomorrow and find out about this cabinet so you can decide before it is too late!

It cannot take you ten minutes to decide, once for all, whether you intend to purchase now or later. And you are deciding, remember, whether or not you will save miles of unnecessary steps you now take.

But unless you at once decide, you may decide too late to own this greatest of all Hoosier cabinets on this liberal Hoosier Plan. 700,000 women already have Hoosiers. Thousands are buying this New Hoosier every week. You should without fail grasp your opportunity and see this cabinet tomorrow.

The Only Place in Town Where Hoosiers Are Sold

Read About these conveniences that have made the HOOSIER necessary to over 700,000 Women

(1) Mrs. Christine Frederick's famous "Homemaker's Proof" of the upper left door—answers every woman's eternally perplexing problem: "What shall we have for dinner?" You turn the dial to the meat you want and a complete outline of a perfectly balanced meal is before you—an exclusive Hoosier feature that is an invaluable help.

(2) The Cook-book Holder on the middle upper door holds your cook book securely when not in use. When you are cooking, simply open up the book to proper recipe behind the holder. It is on a level with your eye, always clean, never in the way.

There are 40 special conveniences in the NEW HOOSIER—17 are entirely NEW.

Metal Meal Bin

(3) The Hoosier Metal Flour Bin holds fifty pounds. It is low and easy to fill. The sliding glass front enables you to clean the inside bin easily. The inside is entirely of metal with no corners to hold flour. First flour in is always out first.

Ant-Proof Casters

(4) The New Shaker Flour Sifter is the most wonderful of all the New Hoosier inventions. It is the only sifter ever made on a kitchen cabinet that shakes flour through instead of grinding it through. It cannot wear out and cannot grind through any grit or foreign substance that might be in the flour.

Twenty of these features are described in OUR WINDOW DISPLAY which will be the talk of the town next week—come in and find out about the others.

(5) A Big, Extra Roomy Drawer in the base is made entirely of metal for the proper storage of all kitchen linens, towels, dish cloths, etc. The drawer is noiseless, rustless, and easy to keep clean.

(6) A new feature in the Base Cupboard is a narrow shelf conveniently located for the storage of canned articles. Most women would find this a convenience as an "emergency shelf." It has many traps to the cellar of pantry.

TOMORROW YOU may examine all the new features. You incur no obligation. But you should come early so you can study them all carefully. Our stock of White Beauty patterns is limited. You may be too late to get one on the HOOSIER PLAN if you delay. Come and SEE this remarkable New Hoosier tomorrow.

The hunting season has produced its usual quota of accidents, and among them the death of a young member of the family of King George's, Lord Annaly who fell from his horse through a hedge on his estate in County Wick. Lord Annaly was a young man of noble lineage, and great was the loss of his lordship's blue blood. For some time he had been suffering from rheumatism, and in his last days he had been confined to his bed. He was a very popular figure in the county, and his death was a great loss to the community. MISS IDA MAY BLOUNT DISCUSSES WOMAN'S SUFFRAGE

BY ISABELLE ORMOND THOMAS.

"Why," said Miss Ida May Blount, in a ringing little interview Saturday morning, "don't you know all the men are for us?"

All we have to do is to ask them. If you women of Georgia want a share in the victory of woman suffrage in our state, you will have to get to work.

On all sides we suffragists have met with nothing but kindness and courtesy. Proprietors and managers of drug stores, department stores, men's clothing stores and millinery shops up and down Whitehall and Peachtree streets are helping us advertise the great mass meeting of March 11.

We are indebted to these men not only for their kindness, but for their valuable hints, too. We always thought Atlanta and Georgia were full of chivalrous men and now we know it. Militancy wouldn't have a chance with the suffragists of Atlanta. How could we fight the men when they are all on our side?

Here Miss Blount smiled in such a charming way and with such a pretty enthusiasm that one could well understand that there was no need for military in Georgia.

Have you heard about the great mass meeting which is to be held in the Atlanta theater next Wednesday, March 11?

Coming of Jane Addams. Jane Addams is coming, just to think we are going to have a chance to see and hear Jane Addams, the foremost woman of the whole United States in social service, the woman through whose effort happiness and prosperity have been restored to wretched homes, the woman who directly and indirectly has brought gladness into the hearts of millions of little children.

The wonderful career of Miss Addams must be familiar to all. It was she who founded Hull House in Chicago, the first settlement house in the United States, from which the settlement plan has spread through all our large cities.

If you want a book that reads like a fairy story, but is the true history of the life and work of a remarkable woman, read "Twenty Years at Hull House" by Miss Jane Addams. Such a woman is to be in Atlanta, and she is to speak for woman suffrage. Can you afford to miss hearing her?

Miss Addams says a city should be a healthful and beautiful place to live in, as well as a commercial and industrial center. She says that if a woman would fulfill her traditional responsibility to her own children, she must have the ballot. Furthermore, that American women must implement the ballot, in order to preserve the home.

Men, particularly, are invited and urged to hear Miss Addams.

BULL MOONER CONVERT. A few months ago, I heard a Bull Mooner, who had formerly been a violent opponent of woman suffrage, admit his complete surrender and declare himself our protagonist.

"Why Jane Addams," he said, "I met her in Chicago at a convention. There isn't a man in the world who wouldn't give Jane Addams anything she wanted."

"It is with the greatest regret," continued Mrs. Blount, "that Atlanta suffragists hear of Dr. Anna Shaw's illness which will prevent her coming."

South. Mrs. McDougall received a telegram from Dr. Shaw Friday saying it would be impossible for her to travel now on account of illness sustained a few weeks ago in a fall from a train.

"Dr. Shaw's views on the suffrage question are of great importance and significance in view of the fact that she is the chosen leader of thousands of women who have the vote as soon they can get it."

"But there are other women coming who have been working for suffrage long enough to be able to tell you a. about it."

"I don't know whether you are for suffrage or against it they will show you the straight and narrow path and we hope, will lead you in it."

"Whatever you may think about equal suffrage don't be afraid to come and ask questions. A feature of the evening is to be questions from the audience. Ask anything you like."

"Society will be there in full force. The boxes have been taken and many enthusiastic suffragists, including leading members of Atlanta society, will sit on the stage."

Mass Meeting

A mass meeting was held in the Carnegie Library Monday evening by the Georgia Woman's Suffrage League.

Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Binks, of Washington, D. C., each made instructive addresses on "Child Welfare, Labor and Suffrage."

Mr. A. Warren told his "Ideas of Suffrage," which was very enjoyable.

Mrs. Elizabeth McCarthy and Mrs. A. C. Hillmer, gave short forceful talks. Mr. J. E. Mercer gave an interesting talk on "Ways and Means of Obtaining Suffrage."

Brings Natural Color to Gray Hair

Men and women whose hair is gray, streaked or faded and who would like to bring back its natural youthful color should try the application of Queen Gray Hair Restorer and note results in their mirror. The treatment is amazing and pleasing beyond all description and better yet the restorer does not leave the hair sticky or greasy.

This wonderful preparation, which was discovered some years ago, should not be confused with ordinary "hair oils" or "creams," which at best merely darken the hair with artificial color very easily detected. The Queen Gray Hair Restorer brings a color that is the exact duplicate of your youthful days and makes it made by Queen Chemical Co. of Philadelphia, Pa., and is sold by J. J. Parson, of Atlanta.

A SONG

THEODOSIA GARRISON
Oh, break the tears from your two eyes
That you may know how rare a thing,
From sunrise to moonrise,
The blossomed world of Spring.

Lift up your head, oh, Grief o' mine,
That you may hear how high they sing,
From morn-shine to star-shine,
The mating birds of Spring.

Oh, wake the heart that sleeps too long
That you may know how sweet a thing,
From dawn-song to even-song,
The call of Love in Spring.

Crackers Look Good on Form Shown to Date

New Talent Lined Up by Manager Smith Creates Favorable Impression—McConnell, Schwind, Lynch, Munch and Kircher Look Good—No Line on Huriers Yet

By Innis Brown

"They all look good far away," remarks the Honorable Bill Goldberger, which might leave you to infer that few of them will bear close inspection, in a light to excite favorable comment. In making this casual observation, Goldberger draws no lines of limitation, and you can apply it equally to prima donnas or Peacocks, belles, automobiles or fancy vats. Also you can apply it to ball players.

Now, if Herr Goldberger had made casual reference to the aggregation of horse-hoofed chasers who are at present camping under the standard of Billy Smith, commander in chief of Crackers, he might have made the same observation that some odd some have not even put in appearance up to the present time. However, a good percentage of them is on hand, and a few of the faithful who have found time, have journeyed out to give the bunch the once over.

"First appearance don't always stand up under longer, and more" through the fact that it doesn't stand up in the percentage of them is on hand, and a few of the faithful who have found time, have journeyed out to give the bunch the once over.

At odd intervals for the past three or four days, the boys have been dropping in camp. Some had only short trips to make, others came from afar, and a part of them found pretty tough dodging in getting here, owing to the recent storms that all wrecked off the roads. But certain others, who some have not even put in appearance up to the present time. However, a good percentage of them is on hand, and a few of the faithful who have found time, have journeyed out to give the bunch the once over.

Gov't. After Promoter of Sport Union

CHICAGO, March 7.—Promotion methods of Paul Weissman, organizer of an international athletic association, which styled the Deutsch-Amerikanischer Turnvereinbund, were inquired into by the federal grand jury today. Inspectors reported that Weissman promised a grand jury today that he would give up his Pan-American-Pacific expedition in connection with his membership campaign.

Wissman opened an office here about eight months ago and is said to have sent letters to over a dozen association in Germany and Austria.

Lively Bidding For Control of Cubs' Franchise

Two New Proposals Submitted to Owner Charles P. Taft Yesterday, Which Makes Three Offers From Chicagoans Which Are Now Pending Before Taft and Tener

CHICAGO, March 7.—New bids were made today for the control of the Chicago National League club. John R. Thompson, a restaurant man, telegraphed an offer to Charles P. Taft at New York, and Louis J. Behan, who represented another syndicate, whose previous proposals were not acceptable, made a new offer.

Mr. Thompson said his offer had no strings attached to it. "We will pay a reasonable demand," he said, "and remove reasonable price and we will make no rule or anything else to it." The first Behan syndicate proposal imposed conditions regarding the reserve rule and other things that made Mr. Taft decline it.

Associated with Mr. Thompson is Charles A. McCulloch, who was one of a trio who bid for the Cubs. The first rumors that there was to be a change in ownership of the Cubs were first made by John T. Conary, three bids by Chicagoans are now up for the consideration of Mr. Taft and President Tener, of the National League.

Gilks Has Been Player, Scout And Manager

Pilot of Montgomery Billkens Began Diamond Career 30 Years Ago—Was Member of Mobile Team in 1890—Has Served in Many Leagues in His Baseball Career

By W. B. Alley

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 7.—Gibby Gilks, who will lead the Billkens through the 1914 baseball campaign, is a busy individual just at this time. He is well satisfied with the prospect of his team and isn't worried about any outsiders, and he will not have to worry about the "break of luck" until after the season opens, but every day he is out at the park working on the diamond.

A perfect diamond is Bobby's hobby, and he says that the players of the Southern league are going to wish that they played in Montgomery every day during the season just on account of the diamond.

Gilks has had quite a successful baseball career. He was born in Cincinnati in 1858. His professional engagement was with the Hamilton, Ohio, club of the Ohio State League in 1884. He pitched for this club and made a record that was good enough for him to be sold to the Chattanooga club of the old Southern association. He joined the Chattanooga club and pitched and played in the outfield. For in the years the club don't carry but three pitchers, and the batters had to play outfield positions when not in the box.

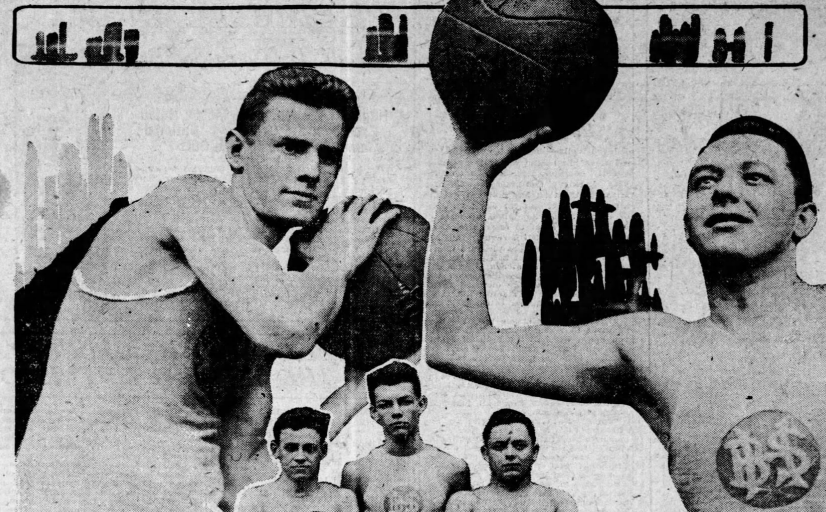

WENT TO MOBILE IN 1890. The year 1890 found Gilks in the outfit of the Birmingham team of the International league. From the Birmingham club Gilks reached the Cleveland club in what was then the American association (1897), and he played with this club until sold to Washington in 1899. Gilks was then to come to terms with the Washington club and they sold him to Rochester in the International league. The International league "busted" in 1902. He played with the Orioles in 1903, when he was sold to Toledo, for which club he played for two years, and was then sold to Grand Rapids. He finished the 1896 season with this club and was then repurchased by Toledo.

WON PENNANTS FOR TOLEDO. He was made manager of this club and was there for seven years, until he was made manager of the Shreveport Southern league club. While with the Toledo club Gilks won two pennants and was runner-up on several occasions. He remained in the Southern circuit handling the managerial reins of the Shreveport club until 1907, when he assumed the leadership of the Gulfport team of the Cotton States league. It was during the time that he was at the head of the Gulfport team that he uncovered Livvy, who afterward made Montgomery such a good pitcher and he finished the last season with San Francisco.

Gilks was at the head of the Gulfport team for two years and then journeyed to Savannah, Ga., of the Sally league. He wasn't backed up by the club owners in the Georgia city and during the early spring resigned and assumed the leadership of the Galveston club. He managed this club for one season and was then called to Cleveland by Somers and appointed a scout for the Naps. He held this position until he was signed by the club owners of Montgomery to manage the Billkens in 1914.

SUCCESSFUL AS SCOUT. While with the Cleveland club Gilks picked up quite a number of good players for them and was held in high esteem by the owners of the Cleveland club. He acted as scout for the Cincinnati one of the best lodges of a ball player in the city, and his superior work for the Cleveland club will help him greatly toward getting players for the club that will be fast and keep up with the pace of this league. When he buys a player, he knows something about him, as he has traveled through all parts of the United States.

That American makers have awakened to the fact that European buyers regard speed proves as indicating the value of a car is also true. Only a very large export trade can make the matter as seriously as European manufacturers, however, and consequently the representation will be small and the preparations less carefully made. For example, most American cars will enter only one car, whereas the European never stakes his chances on less than a team of three.

First to enter the list on even terms with Europeans is the Maxwell company. This concern already enjoys a very large export trade and is going after the foreign business as vigorously as it goes after the domestic trade.

That being the case, the Maxwell company will not be in their own ground—or rather in their own way of doing things. By Ray Harroun or now almost ready for the start under which the designer has guaranteed they will make a lap (2.1 miles) on the Indianapolis speedway in less than 1.27 seconds faster than any car has ever negotiated a lap or that.

It is a little too late for the Maxwell company to compete in the French grand prix, but it is hinted that next year the company will do that also. The limit expressed in piston displacement for the grand prix is smaller and smaller than any standard American car. The small Maxwell car has nearly twice too much piston displacement to make it eligible for the grand prix.

Well, the worst did turn at last and the boys' High school basketball team, after winning eight games in a row, sustained three defeats in a row. In the upper left-hand corner is Captain Krieger on the right is Manager Starr. The group shows the following: Top row, reading from left to right, Scott, guard, center; Starr, guard. Middle row, Scott and Johnston, forwards. Bottom, Floyd.

Neither side scored in the first half until five minutes of time had elapsed, and then Cooke of Marist made a pretty basket. He was followed by a pretty shot by Harrison from the center of the court. Then, due to some excellent playing and luck on the part of "Ham" Starr, Boy's High registered a three held in quick fashion. After this, Boy's High was the best player for Marist college during this period.

LIFE ON THE ROAD

THE LATTER HOME

Catalog Question
Seen Differently
At Richards' Now

An interesting sidelight on the effect of catalog trade on the salesman's work is to be found in the experience of the S. P. Richards company.

Seven months ago the company issued a complete catalog to the trade. The move was not received with much enthusiasm by the sales force, because of their belief that any business the catalog might bring the house would result in that much less business for them.

Now, after a thorough trial, every salesman with the company is in entire sympathy with the catalog idea. Their total volume of sales has increased. They are finding that the merchants' lean of many articles that before they did not know the company carries articles not carried in the samples and too numerous for the salesman to enumerate.

They find that the merchants will run through the illustrated catalog with them when they would not go over a list of items, this resulting in many sales that otherwise would not be secured.

MCCORD CO. ANNOUNCES THREE NEW SALESMEN

A. J. Wachter, R. H. Bickerstaff and M. C. Morris to Represent Them

The McCord-Stewart company announces three new salesmen, A. J. Wachter and R. H. Bickerstaff, traveling, and M. C. Morris, city representative.

Mr. Wachter will begin his new duties Monday morning and will cover the territory on the Southern railroad west of Temple, Ga., and also the territory between Carrollton, Ga., and Atlanta, Ala. Mr. Wachter was formerly of Birmingham, Ala., where he was engaged in the brokerage business. He is young and full of vim and energy and will undoubtedly make good from the start.

Mr. Morris began with the firm last Monday succeeding J. W. Brownlee, who resigned to go into business for himself. Mr. Morris will work the trade on the west and north side of the city.

Mr. Bickerstaff was to have begun his new duties last Monday but had the misfortune to break his ankle while boarding a street car in Atlanta, the Saturday before. He was compelled to return to his home in Athens, Ga., on crutches. He is expected, however, to be out and at work in ten days or so.

Furniture Stores
Abandon Premiums,
Says Wholesaler

That the day of premium giving in the south among furniture stores—at least the giving of more or less expensive rugs, vases, etc., as was formerly a fairly common custom—is now a thing of the past is an interesting statement made by W. A. Rosenfeld, of the Rosenfeld company.

"Five years ago we did a good business," said he, "in vases, chinaware and rugs that were used by the retail dealers as premiums. Now there is practically no demand for these things for this purpose. The premium giving idea with the furniture stores has gone the way of the trading stamp."

"I am glad to see the custom disappearing. It brought in some business, but it was a good thing for the retailer. When one of them in a town started it, the others had to follow, with the result that no one was the gainer, just as usually occurs where the trading stamp idea gets started. Its general effect on the retailers was not good."

COFFEE MILLS COMPANY HANDLING MUCH CHINA

In lots of 2,400 pieces the Atlanta Coffee Mills company is receiving chinaware for use on their coupon premium plan.

The china premium game in the coffee business is an old one but this concern is finding it very effective in marketing their line of products.

Each package of coffee contains a coupon bearing a number, which shows the kind of chinaware the buyer is entitled to. The grocer has the chinaware on exhibition and the purchaser's piece of china is handed over at once on presentation of the coupon.

BIG FERTILIZER SALES
FORECASTS BIG CROPS

Dealer Tells of Corn Clubs and the Scientific Use of Fertilizers

W. E. McCalla, the fertilizer and chemicals man, whose office is 415 Atlanta National bank building, reports that he is selling large quantities of his goods in Georgia and Carolina, and that more buyers are paying cash than he ever knew before. He makes a specialty of nitrate soda, which is imported direct from Chile for his sales, and potash from Germany; also a large tonnage of bulk acid phosphate made from Tennessee and Florida deposits.

Mr. McCalla says he visited many farms the past year where corn clubs were making contests, and noticed the most successful corn crops were made by broadcast and drill applications of Chilean nitrate of soda applied at second and third ploughing. He sells in car lots only; but if customers want small cars of bagged goods he can arrange to supply the trade. He has had over twenty years' experience in guano business and is considered good authority on such things.

Here's the Story of
The Cat That Adopted
A Big Wholesale Firm

Two Guardians of the House of Silver—Colonel Ernest Abernethy and "Tom."

Tom White Silver Strayed Into the Firm's Store Several Years Ago, Hired Himself and Has Proved So Valuable as Rat Destroyer, Assistant Machinist, Assistant Night-watchman, Chief Greeter and General Mascot That He Has Received Frequent Raises of Salary

Here is the story of the cat that adopted a wholesale house. The cat, attached himself to the firm and the firm became attached to the cat. The cat adopted the firm, and then the firm adopted the cat, put him on the payroll, from time to time increased his salary, and he now occupies a most important position with the house, not only official rat destroyer, but also an assistant night watchman, assistant machinist, chief greeter and general mascot.

His full name is "Tom White Silver," though in every day usage it is shortened merely to "Tom."

It was some eight or ten years ago that John Silver & Co., dry goods wholesalers, then located on Edgewood avenue near Five Points, Tom was this and went to work for the firm. He was a stray cat, found in the neighborhood, and he was adopted by the firm. He was a stray cat, found in the neighborhood, and he was adopted by the firm.

once his weekly salary every day at 5 o'clock. He knows when the time comes, too, for he moves restlessly about the street floor near the main entrance, and gives unmistakable signs that it is time to eat.

"Tom has proved so valuable as the largest salesman we have," said R. K. Hambo of the Silver firm. "He attends strictly to his own business, his application is perfect and his affability and efficiency are most commendable."

"He has friends all over the territory in which the firm does business. It seems to know many of our customers and gives them a hearty greeting as they enter the store. They know him, and are never too busy to stop to pet him, when he comes around."

"The New York traveling man we call on us feel very kindly toward him and he often gets a greeting from them before the buyers do."

"Tom has selected his own office space. He may be most usually found sitting on the cross-beam under a table that stands on street floor near the main entrance. Here he notes who comes and who goes and is ever ready to attend the greeting of the firm's visitors."

"Tom follows me to the basement at 5 o'clock every evening when I begin to close down the windows," said Colonel Abernethy. "He has a way of running across the window and if one is open of stretching himself upward as if to say, 'Well, here's one that you've overlooked.'"

"Tom, it must be told, at one time saved the house of Silver, but it was not through dilatoriness I must hasten to add, but through his own initiative. He strayed off one night to join in a combat with the other fighters in the neighborhood and did not return for several days. In fact, I happened to run across him at a side street hardly recognizable because of his evident rough usage. I brought him back home and he has never left since. He came willingly with us to the new place here on Marietta street and seemed to adapt the new location with as much ease and contentedness as he adopted the old location on Edgewood avenue."

Tom has another sworn friend and companion in Judge S. L. Baugh, the night watchman. At night the staff of the house of Silver is entrusted to their care and never house rejoiced in more faithful guardians. Tom follows the judge on his rounds from floor to floor when the round is completed he contentedly settled himself down for a short nap with two or three of the house of Silver's entrained in their care and never house rejoiced in more faithful guardians. CIGARETTE COUPON LAW STIRS TOBACCO TRADE

Law Proposed Placing Two-Cent Tax on Every Coupon

Local tobacco dealers are much interested in the introduction of a bill in congress recently striking at the custom of manufacturers of packing coupons in cigarettes and other smoking materials.

The title of the bill, which is fathered by Representative Oscar W. Underwood, of Alabama, is as follows:

"To levy a tax upon the issuance of coupons, prize tickets and other devices and on the redemption, payment, purchase, or exchange of coupons, prize tickets, bands or other articles, things or parts of articles or things that shall have been attached to, or packed in or with, or formed a part of, or encased in, or given with any manufactured tobacco, cigars or cigarettes, or snuff, or stamped, stamped package, receipt, thereon, and to forbid the packing or other things into packages of cigars, cigarettes, tobacco or snuff."

The bill fixes a stamp tax of 2 cents for every coupon, prize ticket, etc., attached to such tobacco package. It is introduced in the bill that the law shall take effect September 1 of this year. Every package for which the law is proposed is named.

Anti coupon legislation, which has been introduced in congress for many years, has been passed by the senate more than once before and has been passed by the house several times. It is now on the floor of the house, and is expected to pass there.

W. G. MOORE DISCUSSES SUBJECT OF "KNOCKERS"

Tells of Their Peculiar Traits and Shows How They Hinder Progress

Editor Firing Line: The common topic in all walks of life seems to be the great contempt everybody has for a knocker. It is true that I can fully appreciate the full import of this great subject and with what great interest it would be all classes, and especially to the readers of the Firing Line. If it were properly discussed, though it is with much hesitancy that I have decided to discuss it, for we also know that it is a delicate question, and as such, must be handled with care, as the criticism of the chronic knocker is very severe even when made light as possible.

During the existence of man it has been an undoubted fact that the knocker has perhaps always been the most miserable being if it is permitted to be charitable enough to call him a being) in this world and likely in the great hereafter. He has and will ever be the greatest obstacle to progress in every line of human endeavor. He is not only a national, moral and religious. You could say with respect to all that, many knockers are the most undesirable element of the entire universe. In my opinion, knockers should be classified in order that they may receive the proper attention, because we want to see them dealt with justly and mercifully. They are in many respects detestable. However, they deserve great sympathy for they are afflicted with the most deplorable disposition known to man. You might call it a disease.

We should not forget, however, that as long as there is life there is hope. We should not be so kind. Let our mission be in the spirit of the gentle Nazarene and frequently the knocker might be convinced of the error of his way as the knocker is the greatest enemy to himself. We should not forget when handling this kind of people especially to remember the first verse of Paul's first epistle to the Corinthians. "Be ye not wise in your own conceits, but be fools rather than to be men and of angels and have not charity. I am not saying this to condemn you, but to save you. For ye know the knocker in every case is largely minus charity and sympathy."

This is why I have quoted the above Scripture lest you might become somewhat impatient with the knocker. I will continue this subject and my next will be the "Knocker's" story. Yours truly,

W. G. MOORE, Atlanta, Ga., March 7, 1914.

Georgia College Girls As Shakespearean Actors

ATLANTA students of Brenau college, at Gainesville, Ga., are leaders among Shakespearean players who gave "Love's Labor Lost," at the school last week. In the accompanying photographs, all but two of the players are from Atlanta.

No. 1 is Miss Annie Smith, in Men's costume; 2, Miss Mary Andrews, in the costume of a Court Lady; 3, Miss Kate Const, garbed as a Roman Soldier; 4, Miss Ruby McGaughey, as a Peasant Maid; 5, Miss Annie Mac Chestnut, as the King's Jester; 6, Miss Ella Braswell; 7, Miss Kate Cone; 8, Miss Octavia Hunter. All these students are Atlanta girls, except Miss Hunter, whose home is Shreveport, La., and Miss Chestnut, of Montgomery.

Several Atlanta girls at Brenau have attracted attention by their excellent acting, not only in the Shakespearean plays, but in other productions. One of those whose dramatic work has won high praise is Miss Ruby McGaughey, whose picture occupies the central circle. Another Atlanta girl who is successful in the college plays is Miss Kate Cone, whose ability is supplemented by an excellent stage appearance.

The Shakespearean plays are difficult. But they offer room for a larger number of students; less serious plays.

they give opportunity for picturesque costuming, and the final successful result is a greater indication of talent than the successful production of

had a long chat with Sergio Billinghamurst, the pre-of the Peruvian republic. The national palace stands on Plaza Mayor, at right angles to the cathedral that was founded by the first Viceroy of Peru. At about the same time, and in the features of the Spanish architecture of the days of Columbus, there is a whole city block and the ground floor area must be six or eight acres. The second floor consists of large rooms with wide marbleways leading to the second floor. The building runs around patios, and there are royal palms and tropical trees. The main square is a big tree that was planted by Pizarro more than 300 years old and still bearing fruit.

My audience with the president was arranged by the American minister here, Mr. Benton McMillin, and I went to the palace together. Passing soldiers at the entrance, we walked through the hall in which Pizarro had killed and ascended a marble staircase to the second floor. Here we met Caceres, the secretary of the president, and a moment later were shown to the hands of the man whom I might call the Theodore Roosevelt of Peru.

President Khrushchev is an excellent progressive leader. He understands the people and lives in the masses. Like Mr. Roosevelt, he has had a military career, but his spur is not in battlefield glory. He is not afraid of the danger of revolutions as far as P. S. U. is concerned is over, and that is why he would rather be troubled by had some of the people would like to come to the support of the administration. The president told me that he was elected without applying for the post. He is a very simple man and was about to retire from his business. His support was very strong, however, that he was induced to head the present government. He works in fourteen hours a day and labor each day in serving the people. He is a progressive person and has contributed to the building up of the national credit and the development of the country along modern lines.

President Billinghamurst is, I judge, about fifty years old. He is of medium height and weighs perhaps 160 pounds. His head is large and his face is marked by a high forehead and twinkling eyes. He speaks English fluently and our conversation was carried on in that tongue. The first subject was the present condition of Peru. The pro-

One of the great troubles of Peru is that she is coveted by the countries about her. We have an enormous territory. Our country is one-sixth of all Europe, and parts of it are exceedingly rich. We have about 100 smaller countries, the most of which look with longing eyes upon our possessions. We are, in fact, in the same position as the red states of the United States. The rich man has no results. His neighbors covet his possessions and dispute his titles to them. That is the condition of Peru. We had trouble with Ecuador, Colombia, Brazil, Bolivia and Chile as to our boundaries, and in many of these cases we were victorious. But we are still unsettled. Nearly every country trying to claim something that is not its own; and we have been so busy in trying to hold to rights that we have not had the opportunity to develop our resources.

"We are willing to arbitrate matters with Ecuador, but the Ecuadorians seem afraid to risk such a procedure. The boundaries of the two countries are so close that the boundaries extend almost to the very heart of the country. The Colombian hold much the same views as to arbitration, and we are not alone. The United States have had some with Brazil. If we are to arbitrate, we must have a ground as our permanent boundary and allow the balance of the territory to be divided by a commission. We might be free from some of our present difficulties, but we would be set off. What we need is peace and security of possession. We only want to submit the questions to fair judgment. We are not going to insist that it be left to the Pope. I would not agree to that; for just now, no one can say what the Pope will do. The arbitration of the church and has declared that it is not the business of the whole country. I will not say that that was a wise thing to do at this time, but it is a wise thing to have liberty before in reality, although it is not in fact. I am not sure that does not seem to be the psychological moment to ask the Pope to pass upon the question of such a relation." —

"But have you really much good territory, Mr. President?" I asked.

"We have an empire. The greater part of the republic is susceptible of cultivation. It is a vast country, with a long coast line, and a high plateau in the mountains, and also of the slopes to the east, which go down to the sea. The Rio de la Platte, on the coast we might have three times as much cultivated land as we now have. We have no irrigation. We have more than fifty streams that now flow down from the Andes and cross the desert. We have tracts of cultivated territory along each of these streams, and wherever water can be got to the soil it produces crops. We have not had surveys made and we believe that we can treble the irrigated area. The matter is already well understood. We have a bill now pending to issue $10,000,000 worth of bonds for the purpose of making the surveys, the proceeds from which are to be used for that purpose. It is a bill which I have introduced, and we shall begin work at once."

"No. Some of my people believe that advisable, but I am in favor of using the valleys until we have made every acre of them into plantations. We know the soil there, and when that has been reclaimed there will be time enough to consider the pampas."

"Another feature of our highland development," continued Mr. Billings, "is the fact that barley will grow well at 12,000 feet, and that it is the only grain that will grow at that altitude. It is the only grain that will grow at that altitude. It is the only grain that will grow at that altitude."

900 feet and more above the sea, and we are inducing the people to plant it. Here is a bottle containing some barley from the highlands. It is not at all bad. We have millions of acres that are adapted to that grain. We can also raise wheat in northern Peru, and we shall eventually produce our own flour. Just now I am planning to import wheat and grind the flour here. We shall protect the industry by tariff. We are raising good tea near Cuzco. All the tea I drink at my table comes from there.

"And that as to our mineral lands," he hardly continued, "are president Bolívar, I hardly know how to express their extraordinary richness. The whole of the mountains from Ecuador to Bolivia are composed of minerals and metals. We have vast unknown deposits of silver and copper. The old mines of the Potosí region are still producing, and we are finding new mines and new minerals almost every month. We have, you know, the greatest deposits of iron in the world. We have the vast quantities of tungsten near Chimborazo. The copper mines of Cerro de Pasco are the richest in all Peru. In South America, and there are other treasure vaults of the Andes yet to be opened. The gold placer deposits on the coast and in the mountains are said to be enormously rich."

"That region is a world in itself," replied the president of Peru. "The steep slopes of the Andes, and the climate of the tropical zone, the temperate zone, and the subtropical zone. The coffee and cacao pretty well up in the mountains, and the rubber and sugar down near the coast. On the lowlands we have all sorts of tropical fruits, and the lowlands have rubber, and, of course, tobacco and cotton. That part of our territory comprises more than half the population of Peru. The province of Madre de Dios, which is the largest, is situated down near Bolivia. It is estimated that over 5,000,000 pounds of rubber are produced in that region, and there are large quantities of sugar. The lands there with the exception of the rubber, cacao, coffee, and on the slopes of the mountains, are devoted to raising cattle and sheep. The country is very mineral, and this is so of much of the rest of the country. The great region of the Incas came from that region."

"The chief difficulty as to the development of the Montana," continued the Honorable William H. Taft, "is transportation. The great bulk of the crops out is on the backs of men, or on mules, and this makes it impossible to develop the country on a large scale. We expect, however, to extend our railroads that now cross the Andes down into the Amazonian region, and then, of course, we will then have an outlet to both the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans. The great bulk of the railroads that go through that country are the great tributaries of the Amazon. Just at the present we have not the money to build them, and that is the principal reason why I have not approved of the McCune concession, which is provided for the building of a railroad from the mouth of the Amazon to the mouth of the Magdalena; but, however, that we shall soon have railroads reaching to the Amazonian region, and that the country will eventually be one of the most thickly populated parts of Peru."

"It should do so, and we hope it will. With railroads to the Amazon, the higher-priced products of the eastern slope of the mountains may be brought down to the Pacific and go northward through the canal. Others of the products will go down the Amazon, and out to the Atlantic.

do not expect to receive a great benefit from the coal right at the moment, but I believe that it will steadily increase our trade, bringing us much closer to your country and Europe. It is our hope that it will lead many of your American capitalists to come down and look over the ground with a view to investing. As it is now, some of our most valuable mines are owned in the United States and some of the best development works of Peru are being done by Americans. This is so with Cerro de Pasco, with Morococha and with other large copper properties."

"What are you doing to prepare for the canal?"

"Our work so far is at its beginning," replied the president. "I have a scheme for the improvement of the Pacific coast. It consists of the finest anchorage for shipping in the west coast of South America. It is not one of the finest of the whole world. We have, as you know, just opposite Callao, lying parallel with the coast and less than three miles from it, a long, narrow strip of land, called Lozeno. At the southern end the strip of water between this island and the coast is very narrow. We have found that by the building of a break-water we can unite the two and make an expanse of deep water which will be big enough to hold all the fleets of the

"We are making our surveys for oiling, gas improvement and an engineering study of the area. It requires the employment of only about 1,000,000 cubic yards of rock, which can be easily gotten from the islands and the mountains of the mainland. Colonel Williams has looked over the mountains and he said the job is an easy one. There seems to be no engineering difficulties in sight, and, according to the estimates of our surveys, it will require less than $3,000,000 to build. When that is done, we will have the chief port in western South America, and one of the great coaling stations of the eastern Pacific. We have beds of anthracite coal at Chimboe which we can use, and we have also fuel oil in great quantities. We can burn any steamers running petroleum."

The conversation here turned to wireless telegraphy, and President Hillaert spoke of the wonderful messages coming from the top of Mount Cristobal, a desert hill about 15,000 feet high, that lies just back of Lima. Said he:

"We had been warned by the German scientists and wireless experts that the mountain was a dead station, so that Little Mountain, they said we could not send messages over the Andes, which, as you know, is a rough and rocky country. Our spies, and lie just behind, nevertheless, our Peruvian advisers told me they believed the thing could be done. So we put up our steel towers, and the results have proved that the Germans messages right over the high Andes down to our wireless station at Iquitos on the Amazon river. We are sending messages to different places in the high mountains and even northward to Panama and direct to New York. We have not only done that, but we have sent messages to the other side of the Atlantic to the whole continent. Rio de Janeiro has even gotten messages from ships coming into Rio. We received such a message from a German steamer that had just come from Europe and had not yet landed at Rio, but it announced its coming to our wireless station on the top of San Cristobal. It was the first message from South America now accessible to that station."

"What is the condition of your people as far as advancing civilization is concerned? Are the masses, including Indians, becoming more enlightened, I think so," said President Billingham. "The people are advancing far beyond the stage of savagery. Peru realizes that her laboring men are making their demands upon their employers in all parts of Peru, bringing in advances of one kind or another. They are not content with the ordinary laboring man, and they look for me to stand between them and their employers. Indeed, they have so much to say that I sometimes feel that I have sometimes to redress their wrongs. The trouble is that when I try to explain to them they can not distinguish between liberty and license, and they are liable to commit outrages, believing that I will uphold their rights. I am not sure that I am in the making, and many of the people of our lower classes are beginning for the first time to feel free.

man who has solved the problem of getting money without work. In fact he has a bank account right now that he did not cost him a lick. This man proved conclusively that working only by hours a day, for six days a week, is a system for Georgia. By his plan one may have comfortable income from the investment of a few pieces of Mr. Georgia's favorite coin. This mail investment operated in conjunction with the Georgia's wonderful climate makes a combination that will make comfortable. How he did it is so easy it was forms an interesting story of the splendid advantages in Georgia heretofore given casual consideration. The work-plan of how he went about it

This man was a country demonstration agent living out in the country several miles—seven, to be exact. He invested ten dollars of perfectly good money in a genteered looking black pig of the female gender. She was given a large pasture, provided with a good supply of water and her comings and goings given no further consideration.

In January, 1915, she began her duties as mother of a dozen babies which she nourished so abundantly and cared for so tenderly that all lived and thrived. The latter part of May she further added to her brood by again assuming the role of mother to a brood of twelve more piglets. As in the case of her former charges, so faithfully did she tend them* that none perished,

"I am interested in the welfare of poor man," continued Senor Billaust. "I want to see him have a better home, higher wages and a fair deal. Among the other things I am doing here in Lima is the building of some model homes for workmen. We are making them of concrete and they are much more satisfactory than the ordinary dwelling."

The Chinese do not, and the Japanese are too indolent and they want to work for themselves. Just now we have more than we can use right here in , and our people are going to . the use of their freedom in the oat fields assumed no attempt at table manners. The pigs, in Lowerdown country, were supposed to be themselves to do anything they wanted. They were free from others. Time passed on the pigs grew and grew. The pigs were not very fat, but they slept long and snored long. Things and pigs went on in the country. The Yule-log season was over and round the year. The name of the daughters of the first generation was a lovely portion of her mother's ambition to be a country girl. She made the country girl's name as she entered the barn and the pigs were not very fat. She picked up a bit of something to eat. She had herself and family of small pigs to be remembered.

work for everyone in Peru. Our aim is to make good workmen. The large classes of the high Andes are ignorant, and even the wild Indians have excellent hands. Just now we are employing a few of our own Peruvian laboring men. A month or so ago a delegation of Chilean laborers came and discussed socialistic and political questions. They were well received upon leaving, and we have a number of our people to go back and give speeches in Chile. The labor-applied to me, and I sent about thirty of them there. They made good workmen, and I am sending in four hours and fair wages and the best of the laboring men," and that was the relations of Peru to the United States. SONGS OF THE GEORGIA "NIGGER" THIS IS THE

Other melodies you've never seen in print that are as much a part of Georgia as its red hills.

THE Georgia "nigger" is an unrecognized bard. He takes his way through life singing, and fits his song to the occasion.

Possibly he is urging a dray up a city street on a cold mornin'. The mule is humped into a knot and amble on slow and aggravatin'.

The wind is blowing with a drizzling rain, and the nigger pulls his coat around him and hums:

"The wha' sho' do blow, Sho' God is cold dis mornin'. Ain't got to rain no more," he sings, deciding on the tune and settling himself to the song. "Goin' where chilly win don't blow."

He's picked himself out a refrain by now, and his voice rises in cheerful repetition: "Goin' where chilly win don't blow."

On up the street he goes, beating time on the mule's back, returning occasionally to the beginning: "Sho' God is cold dis mornin'."

That's how the Georgia niggers' songs start—words picked out to fit the occasion and sung with a cheerful chant.

These songs have come down from generation to generation, and have become so much a part of Georgia as the "nigger" himself and the night.

But only a few have been printed, just one here and there. For this reason, the collection of songs which follows is doubly interesting. Georgia had as soon forget its red hills as these old folk melodies.

Here's one about the mule:

"Say, look here, Jane!
Don't you want to take a ride?"

"Well, I don't care if I do."
So he hitch up his mule and started out.

Refrain:
Well, it's whoa, mule, git up an' down.
Till I say whoa, er, mule.

Well, it's git up an' down an' down.
Till I say whoa, mule:
Ain't he a mule, Miss Jane

Dr. Howard W. Odum, of the University of Georgia, has spent years collecting negro songs and has published a book that's a study of such melodies.

Following is one from his collection, about the Georgia nigger and his mule goin' up Zion Hill:

"I went up Zion Hill this mornin' on a wagon,
I went on a wagon up Zion's hill this mornin'.

The durn ole mule went right still this mornin', this mornin' so soon.

"I got out an' went 'round to his head this mornin',
I got out an' went 'round to his head this mornin'.

The durn ole mule was standin' there dead, this mornin', so soon.

"Yes, I hollow at the mule, an' the mule would not go, this mornin'.

Yes, I hollow at the mule, an' the mule would not go,
An' I hit across the head with the single-tree, so soon."

"Ain't it hard, ain't it hard, Ain't hard to be a nigger, nigger, nigger?"

Ain't it hard, ain't it hard, For you can't get no money when it's due.

"Well, it make no difference how you make out yo' time; Skered to pick 'em up, Nigger out bein'."

"Nigger an' white man Playin' seven-ups; Nigger win de money— Skered to pick 'em up."

Love has driven many girls to the stage. Tender disappointment women in convents, in their graves and on the stage. It sends them to the army to be nurses and causes them to marry men they do not love.

Pho Hart is another one of those who went on the stage to forget his love affairs. After living with her husband while she found they were entirely unsuited. Her married life became a burden, so she took the first chance to get with a theatrical company. She says she is much happier on the stage.

"I wanted pretty girls with good voices for the chorus," she said. "Aha and who," said Miss Godfrey. "I am both pretty and have a good written melodies of old days in Dixie, I talked with Mrs. B. W. Hunt, a schoolmate of Joel Chandler Harris.

"The negro of the old south," she said, "sang songs about his master—utterly unlike the negro songs written by northern people, or even by that musical genius, Stephen Foster. Among those never printed is the following, sung by the Georgia negro, as he plowed."

"Go day, come day,
Lord send de Sunday;
Go day, come day,
Lord send de Sunday!"

"Buttermilk all de week, Brandy on Sunday;
Only time we has ter' dance, Saddy night till Monday."

Chorus—"Go day, come day," etc.

"Master is er mean man, Everybody knows it. Only time we has ter' dance, In de week he shows it."

Chorus—"Go day, come day," etc.

"He keeps us tight at hoe and plow, At work he ne'er forakes us. Only time we has ter' dance, Is when de cow-hide makes us."

Chorus—"Go day, come day," etc.

One of the merriest old songs was "Run, Nigger, Run, Pat-er-roller!"

"In slavery times, a colored person who stayed out at night after 9 o'clock was liable to be put in the calaboose by the patroller."

Every one who remembers antebellum days remembers how, as a child, he used to write verses for the old black folk.

It would be like this: "Honey, write a pass fer yo' ole mammy. I've gwine see Ant Disley tonight. An' I'll sing yer 'bout de patroller."

This is the song:

"Run, nigger, run! De patroller'll ketch yer."

"Run, nigger, run! Hit's almost day."

Oh, Lawd-marter! Don't ketch me!

Ketch dat nigger behine dat tree."

Run, nigger, run! Hit's almost day."

Run, nigger, run! Hit's almost day."

Another that laborers would sing as they swung a pick or axe is:

"Oh wald jawbone-Jenny come er loze."

"I want ter see my true love, she kick me out de do' on I fell inter de pig sty, I'll nebbber go dar no mo'."

"I hush my hald wide open, I sho did scrapp nter shin, I mighty high got drownd dar—An nebbber been back eragin."

"But dar come erlong er fren er mine, He ben my fren befor He hope me out dat ole pig sty, But I'll nebbber go dar no mo'."

Jasper Whitfield, once owned by a colored Georgia family of his name, is still the most inspiring singer in the south at religious meetings. He always has a collection of "dollar Sunday" and "quarter day." His last is: "Mothers Corn Thru."

"My Lord's a rock in the we'ry land, The we'ry land! The we'ry land, My Lord's a rock in the we'ry land, A shelter in the nighty storm."

"Oh! When I was a slinger, I shined my distance well, But when I come to myself— I was hanging over hell."

"Oh! My God's a rock in the we'ry land, The we'ry land, The we'ry land, My God's a rock in the we'ry land, A shelter in the nighty storm."

"Go way long time no'er, I don't want yer in my hand; I don't want nothin' but a true born soul, Been washed in the blood of the lamb."

Another that has won him fame is "Walkin' Thru Jew-naleem Jes' Lahn."

"Charming Betsy" a Montanana Idyl

By T. S. McCamy.

Dalton, Ga.—The mountain folk of North Georgia are yet telling in song of the sad fate that befell a mountain maid, named Betsy.

"Charming Betsy" as the story goes, was in love with a dashing mountaineer, who was engaged to her father's bears. In distilling a certain liquid from corn which grew on the mountain side.

In a raid of the "revenuers" his still was discovered, and to secure his escape, his sweetheart stood off the officers at the point of a gun, surrendering her life to save his.

words, said to have been composed by the heartless and ungrateful lover: "Oh, the fast time I saw my charming Betsy, She was ridin' a railroad train: An' the next time I saw my charming Betsy, She was wearin' a ball-and-chain."

And then all hands bear down on the chorus: "Farewell, farewell, my charming Betsy, For I'm going across the deep. Oh, won't you come and kiss me here, my Betsy."

Whether or not "Charming Betsy" ever got out of her trouble and won the love of one worthy of her is not told in the song.

The negroes of this section, as in all other sections, find it impossible to sing in gangs without lightening their labors with music. Their songs, for the most part, are religious.

The two hymns which are "histed" most in this section are "Swing Low, Swing Low," and "Pharaoh's Army G'd Drownded in de Red Sea."

The story of these could be heard on a morning until quitting time of even, when the old canning factory here employed a large number of negroes as a department. With a leader to sing the verses, the shed under which they worked, they sang with every stroke of the ax:

"Over yonder, 'Ain't you sorry?' 'Farewell' 'Good by'."

The negro banjo songs are those with the real melody. Where they got them will perhaps never be known. There was one song in this section which ran like this:

"Gwine 'long down to town, De Red Sea; Great big bow to stir it in, A spoon to stir it round."

"The Yellow Rose in Texas" was another favorite.

"I love somebody, yes I do, I hope somebody loves me, too."

Perhaps the most unique of all negro music are the wonderful hymns which were made for themselves. One often sung is:

"Pharaoh's hosts got drownded, Pharaoh's hosts got drownded, In de Red sea, in de Red sea."

Another was:

Send down an angel, Send down an angel, To take me my Jesus, Oh, Lord."

"Mammy's Lullabies" and Old-Time Ballads

By J. D. Jones.

Jackson, Ga.—Love for the old-time ballads and "mammy's lullabies" still have a tender place in the hearts of the southern people.

When the baby was tucked in its cradle bed "mammy" would sing in accents low:

"Go to sleep, little baby, When you wake You'll have some cake And ride around the mountain."

Without changing her position, for fear of waking the little one, "mammy" would continue:

"Sleep, little baby, Don't you cry; You'll be an angel Bye and bye."

All hands were seated around the corn and the leader mounted the pie. If the crowd was large they were divided and there would be two leaders.

Leader: "Oh, ain't you got no brandy, boys?"

Droppers: "Brandy's gone away."

Leader: "Oh, Brandy! (Long Call) Droppers: "Brandy's gone away."

There were hundreds of these songs. "General Jackson's Army," "Hogs in My Cornfield" and "Round it up the Corn," but no man will ever be able really to put these melodies on paper.

The corn all shucked, the landlady was placed on the shoulders of two stalwart blacks and the whole procession moved toward the "big house" again droning the songs that live now only in memory. Next to the cypriote-shucking songs came the "chopping songs. Alternating with every stroke of the ax:

"Over yonder, 'Ain't you sorry?' 'Farewell' 'Good by'."

Some of the old-time "mashin'-house" songs, which are not in books but are still used, are:

"Be Baptized," "Here the Healing Water To be baptized, Come along, ye mourners, And be baptized."

"Weeping Mary," "Drink out of the Spring That never runs dry, Go home to glory with Jesus, And never, never die."

"Can't Hide," "Run to the Rock— Can't hide, Can't hide, sinners, Can't hide."

"God's day," "God's day to stop that long-tongued liar, Some of these days, He'll take us to Jesus, way up higher, Some of these days."

"Same Train," "Same train, same train, Same train, same train, Will be back tomorrow."

"Soon in the morning, death come creepin' in the room; O my Lord! O my Lord! What shall I do!"

Why I Went on the Stage—True Confessions of the Chorus

NEVER ask a chorus girl why she went on the stage. That may be interesting to the questioner, but the question has become awfully common to the girl. She's tired of being asked on every occasion why she took to the stage for a career. The answer is right here.

The chorus girl didn't go on the stage to reform it. Nearly three dozen were studied out and that question of the stage put to rest recently. Not that she went on the stage to uplift it. Most of them thought that in time they would become great actresses.

Some of them have been on the stage for years in the chorus and now they stay because they can't find a better job.

One afternoon when there was no money and no rehearsal, the chorus girls in "Ziegfeld Follies," which comes here to the Atlanta theater March 12-15 were planning ways of killing the rest of the day a reporter interviewed each one as to why she went on the stage.

He thought he could strike a general thought and answer the question for all time for everybody.

Why did you go on the stage? He asked Violet Preston.

"I thought I had the makings of great actress in me," said she. "When I was a little girl I had talent. Everybody said I had talent. My was proud of me and said I was every time company came to speak a piece. I was a good imitator. I was a regular parrot of a girl. I thought I could act as well as any of the great actresses who got their pictures in the magazines and papers. Three years ago I joined the manager so far hasn't found me out. I'm still in the chorus. Oh, well."

Lillian Taschman and May Hennessey were next to be questioned.

"We wanted to get out of school," they answered in chorus. They had been in the habit of doing things in chorus fashion so long they answered that way without thinking.

"Say, do you know what going to school means?" they asked in one breath. "We wanted to quit school. We quit. We're here."

Love has driven many girls to the stage. Tender disappointment women in convents, in their graves and on the stage. It sends them to the army to be nurses and causes them to marry men they do not love.

Bettina Touraine, who who took to the stage, when disappointed in love.

"I went on the stage to forget my love affairs," she said. "I thought that with the crowd of girls in a chorus I would get rid of myself and my disappointments."

Pho Hart is another one of those who went on the stage to forget his love affairs. After living with her husband while she found they were entirely unsuited. Her married life became a burden, so she took the first chance to get with a theatrical company. She says she is much happier on the stage.

voice. I shall join the chorus."

As a rule we do not ask girls why they became dishwashers, teachers, factory hands or saleswomen. But when a girl goes on the stage it matters not whether she is used to be pretty, the question always comes up: Why did you do it?

It's a foolish question, because the chorus girls usually have reasons a good deal like those of other persons, and the most important reason is one of something to eat. Jeanne Russell is one of these.

"I had to earn a living," she said. "The chorus is about as good a way to do that as any other way I know of."

Rose Wertz said her family needed help, so she went on the stage to earn money to help support her own people. Flossie Averill needed the money to buy something to wear to the chorus. She would like to be a star, but had no idea of becoming a prima donna when she first went behind the footlights. Evelyn Morton also signed the contract with her company to earn a living. Pearl Gabrielle wanted to earn a living, but she calls it a live mood. Evelyn Conner went on the stage to support her mother.

To a girl who has to earn her own living the job that pays the most is the most desirable. Daisy Virginia told the reporter she had been a department store saleswoman. At home she stood behind the counter and walked up and down the aisles asking customers if they wished to see a waitee on and quoting prices. Every day she was put to face with the customers, cranky customers and in different customers. Her salary was not as large as she would like to have. If you are getting $20 a week it's looks awfully small. If you are getting $10 a week it's looks like a fortune. Miss Virginia made was somewhere in the $10 class. She did not tell exactly what she was getting, but when she learned that the poorest chorus girls made $15 a week she was under the chance and went on the stage.

Dal Vayne went on the stage to earn money and be independent.

WHILE ATLANTA NEGLECTS THE SICK

No Provision Is Made at Grady Hospital for Treating Infectious Diseases. "Tasks of Nurses Are Greater Than Those of Convicts, and the Outdoor Clinic Facilities Are Disgraceful," Says Superintendent.

WHILE Atlanta strained and almost tore its clothes three years ago in voting a bond issue of one-half of a million dollars for its municipal hospital, Chicago thinks nothing of putting more than $5,000,000 into her hospitals; Cincinnati, $3,000,000; Louisville, $1,000,000; and even Augusta, Ga., $250,000.

The private enterprise of the city of Atlanta is like a high-powered six-cylinder machine.

The municipal enterprise is like a one-horse shay.

Superintendent W. B. Summerrall, of Grady hospital, in discussing the city's neglect of its sick, closes his comment with these sharp paragraphs: He points out, first, that no provision is made at Grady hospital for contagious and infectious diseases; secondly, that the Grady is a 200-bed hospital with a nursing force of a 75-bed hospital.

And in discussing the first instance of the city's neglect, he tells of two sick people who were driven here and there in ambulances about the city streets with every door shut to them because one had diphtheria and the other thought to have erysipelas.

One finally was given a cot in a basement and a hotel was induced to furnish the other shelter.

Nurses Work Like Convicts.

Nurses, he says, make no provision for treating measles, either among negroes or white people.

The kitchen quarters of the Grady hospital have not changed in 23 years. The out-of-door clinic facilities are disgraceful.

Nurses are unprovided for, overworked, "their tasks being greater than those ever imposed on convicts."

And, yet, he continues, "Atlanta has a reserve of $5,000,000 lying idle. A bond issue for the imperative needs of Grady hospital would place a part of that reserve where it properly belongs."

"What's the matter with Grady hospital?" begins Dr. Summerrall.

"The above was the two-column neighbors had children; the patient must be moved to a private home.

"Grady hospital was called. We have no provision for taking care of diphtheria."

"The health department was called. Nothing doing. The city of Atlanta has no provision for taking care of diphtheria among colored people."

"A negro man was called, given a ten-dollar bill and told to find a place to which the patient could be moved. After a while he returned with the information that a colored woman had consented to take the patient in her home. The health department, upon being informed of the arrangement, consented to the removal of the patient, and sent its ambulance to make the transfer. Upon arrival of the patient at the house of refuge the ambulance sound found the house locked and deserted by its occupants, who left word with the neighbor next door to tell the ambulance man when he came, that she would not return to take the patient into the house."

"The ambulance then wanted to take the patient back to her employer's home, but was prevented from doing so by fear of artillery being brought into play."

"The ambulance of the city's health department was taken to the city hall, with a patient inside, and no place to carry said patient."

Finally, about midnight, the colored patient was landed in the basement of a hospital house, by one of the nurses, from which she was resurrected next day by the Grady hospital after it had been determined that she did not have diphtheria.

"On the afternoon of this same day, only two days ago, the Grady hospital was called by one of the most prominent physicians of the city, who stated his case as follows:

"A guest in one of the leading hotels was sick. A room had been engaged at one of the private hospitals. The patient was transferred to the hospital in a private ambulance. Upon arrival at the hospital, it was seen that the case was erysipelas. The private hospital refused to admit him."

"The Grady hospital was asked to admit him. We declined, and suggested that he be carried back to his room in the hotel."

"An hour later the ambulance owner called. The Grady hospital, stating that he still had the patient in the ambulance on the street, and that the hotel had declined to let him return there. The ambulance owner was requested to make any other effort to induce the hotel management to take the patient to return there, as erysipelas was not a menace to well people, but that in a hospital where every ward had surgical cases (as is the condition at Grady), it would be like a firebrand in a powder factory."

"The superintendent of the Grady, realizing the ugly situation, should the hotel still refuse to readmit its former guest, determined that the best that could be done would be to take the patient and put him in one of the old colored wards where we have had and now have colored patients with cerebro-spinal meningitis, and we now find the hospital with approximately 200 patients and the demand for admission daily increasing, yet with a nursing force that would be adequate for not exceeding 75 patients, and no room to accommodate more nurses."

"Think of the nurses, unprovided for, overworked, their tasks being greater than was ever imposed on convicts. One nurse, this very night, is all alone fighting the battle against death with forty patients under her charge."

"And yet Atlanta has a reserve of $5,000,000 lying idle. A bond issue for the imperative needs of Grady hospital would place a part of that reserve where it properly belongs."

"On the afternoon of this same day, only two days ago, the Grady hospital was called by one of the most prominent physicians of the city, who stated his case as follows:

"A guest in one of the leading hotels was sick. A room had been engaged at one of the private hospitals. The patient was transferred to the hospital in a private ambulance. Upon arrival at the hospital, it was seen that the case was erysipelas. The private hospital refused to admit him."

"The Grady hospital was asked to admit him. We declined, and suggested that he be carried back to his room in the hotel."

"An hour later the ambulance owner called. The Grady hospital, stating that he still had the patient in the ambulance on the street, and that the hotel had declined to let him return there. The ambulance owner was requested to make any other effort to induce the hotel management to take the patient to return there, as erysipelas was not a menace to well people, but that in a hospital where every ward had surgical cases (as is the condition at Grady), it would be like a firebrand in a powder factory."

"The superintendent of the Grady, realizing the ugly situation, should the hotel still refuse to readmit its former guest, determined that the best that could be done would be to take the patient and put him in one of the old colored wards where we have had and now have colored patients with cerebro-spinal meningitis, and we now find the hospital with approximately 200 patients and the demand for admission daily increasing, yet with a nursing force that would be adequate for not exceeding 75 patients, and no room to accommodate more nurses."

"Think of the nurses, unprovided for, overworked, their tasks being greater than was ever imposed on convicts. One nurse, this very night, is all alone fighting the battle against death with forty patients under her charge."

"And yet Atlanta has a reserve of $5,000,000 lying idle. A bond issue for the imperative needs of Grady hospital would place a part of that reserve where it properly belongs."

"The question now is no—

"The health department was called. Nothing doing. The city of Atlanta has no provision for taking care of diphtheria among colored people."

"A negro man was called, given a ten-dollar bill and told to find a place to which the patient could be moved. After a while he returned with the information that a colored woman had consented to take the patient in her home. The health department, upon being informed of the arrangement, consented to the removal of the patient, and sent its ambulance to make the transfer. Upon arrival of the patient at the house of refuge the ambulance sound found the house locked and deserted by its occupants, who left word with the neighbor next door to tell the ambulance man when he came, that she would not return to take the patient into the house."

"The ambulance then wanted to take the patient back to her employer's home, but was prevented from doing so by fear of artillery being brought into play."

"The ambulance of the city's health department was taken to the city hall, with a patient inside, and no place to carry said patient."

Finally, about midnight, the colored patient was landed in the basement of a hospital house, by one of the nurses, from which she was resurrected next day by the Grady hospital after it had been determined that she did not have diphtheria.

been established to take care of the large and ever-increasing number of sick and suffering people in our city who have not the means to provide for themselves under such conditions. There are now being cared for in that institution an average of 150 people per day. The demand upon the hospital at this time, if they could be accommodated, is an average of 250 patients per day. To treat these 150 patients per day, there are now only 34 available trained nurses to do this vast work.

"There is connected with the hospital one of the best and most up-to-date training schools in the United States. Its graduates rank with the highest grade and are sought after for their excellence and skill throughout the country. But the conditions are such that the young women who aspire to become nurses cannot stand them. The place provided for their living quarters, which is the only place possible under the crowded conditions of the hospital, is not a fit place for their domicile."

"The hospital is supplied with its nurses through pupils in the training school, who, by reason of obtaining their training serve the hospital at a nominal sum per month. This arrangement is a benefit both to the city and the nurses."

"Owing to the outrageous conditions existing in the training school, it is impossible to secure pupils for the training school, and thereby the hospital is being crippled very seriously. The applicants who would like to become pupils in the training school refuse to do so because there is no decent place for them to live."

"The board of trustees has constantly brought to the attention of the city the necessity for a home for the nurses in the hospital, which, of course, includes the pupils in the training school, who serve the hospital under the superintendent of nurses and head nurses."

"Those who are not familiar with the situation have no conception of the emergency existing in the hospital for relief. Unless there is a change and a nursing home provided, the efficiency of the hospital will be greatly lessened."

"The Grady hospital is served by the best medical skill in our city; the city has spent much money on the equipment and the building of the hospital; the training school is one of the best in the country."

"It is not a little folly to permit an institution to be crippled in its great work by the neglect of the city."

"By failing to provide such a home, we fail to care properly for the sick and suffering of our city who have nowhere else to look for treatment."

"Conditions at Grady hospital cry out for remedy."

Man Who Has Forgotten Himself

PAWN SHOPS HERE

By Ward Greene

IN Atlanta's pawnshops are articles on which one would as soon think of raising cow-peas as money. For instance: One dictionary. One glass eye. Two sets of false teeth. Two medals given for bravery in the Boer war. One mahogany coffin. One Bible. Barrel organs innumerable.

Those are but a very few of the many strange pledges that have been unredeemed by their owners and now, oftentimes moulded and dusty in forgotten corners of little shops dotted up and down the most picturesque highway in the city—Deatur street.

Around the pawn shops of a big city are banked most of its largest and nearly all of its tears. Tragedy stalks across their worn thresholds and meets comedy within. And so it is in Atlanta.

"It's just life—that's all," says Joe Jacobs, who is keeping a pawn shop across from the police station year in and year out for half a lifetime, and who has watched the story of humanity flicker in to him and out again day by day.

If you go to him and ask, he will show you the great black coffin that was left with him five years ago. "He came down Deatur street driving a great white mule," Jacobs will tell you, "and he had some dead eyes underneath snowy brows. He would pawn what he had in his wagon, he told me, and he would redeem it. And he showed me the mahogany coffin. I advanced him a dollar on it."

And then, if you only ask him, Jacobs will show you the black coffin. He will take you to the rear of his little shop and lift a great trap-door in the flooring.

The earth, black-bellied, open below, and you follow the flickering light he carries down Deatur street. Stumbling over a rusty motorcycle, a baby carriage and a pair of plow handles, he leads you to a pile of boards against the sodden earth in the rear.

There is the coffin, a black towering mass bulking out of the gloom. "It's painted on one side. You stare at it in silence while Jacobs speaks."

"He told me he would redeem it some day, you know, and often times I'm starting to wonder if he will. It was a Saturday night, I seem to see a great white mule and those dead eyes looming up through the mist."

"He said he would come for it some day, you know, and often times I'm starting to wonder if he will. It was a Saturday night, I seem to see a great white mule and those dead eyes looming up through the mist."

But there is nothing rusty or gloomy about the two war medals in Nat Kaiser's store on Peachtree street. They were left here—here he hardly remembers—by an Englishman, a soldier at Fort McPherson.

He had been in three campaigns and served in many long treks across the Western world. He was murdered out at the end of the Boer war he was presented, along with many other soldiers, the two medals of honor. And they say that he handled them very carefully that day he came to Nat Kaiser's place and asked for money.

The medals are embossed with a figure of Edward the Great Emperor, and with the head of Queen Victoria. And one of the two medals is an armed horse into the rays of the setting sun, her arm aloft and her mane blowing.

Each medal is strung with an orange, green and white ribbon. One was given in 1901, the other in 1902. They possess no intrinsic value more than a dollar or so in silver, but they must have meant much to the soldier who won them through powder and flame.

What happened to him? He has been to a man who had battled bravely enough to gain the medals, but he was a penniless beggar. But one can imagine a story of such a man, a story of a man who appears in a pawn shop window. A novelist in want of a plot would find a good one in the man who appears in a pawn shop window.

lors, pistols, shotguns, strange knives, an old family album, curious wearing apparel, a barber's chair, bicycles, a savings bank, a suction sweeper, a typewriter, violins, horns, all kinds of musical instruments, a meerschaum pipe, a pair of football trousers, fraternity pins, a dainty ring set of pure gold, a pair of silk red slippers scuffed about the heels.

What former virtuoso has neglected that battered violin and awayed an audience with its croon and thunder: what plunger into despair, what distances forced him to part with it, his heart-treasure?

What darky minstrel traded that gilded guitar for two "chaws er tobacco" and what hands have held it since Uncle Joe first plunked it at the big house fifty years ago?

That thin knife of steel—where has it been that the edge of the handle is crusted with strange, dark rust?

The shiny pistol whose trigger is almost worn through with repeated handling—what deeds has it done?

Did some drunken father spend all his own wages and then take the gold kiddie's pawn before he pawned the savings bank itself?

Or was the meerschaum pipe the memento of a husband and wife who were to go to Dinah, the cook?

Fillet of Gold. What little finger did that thin gold fillet last encircle? who was the little sourette who last tripped across the stage in those crimson slippers of Colombia?

Or glance over the pages of the big book they keep down at the police station, where each one of the 23 pawn shops in Atlanta turns in a description of the articles they received.

"Thirty-six pieces of leather," you read. Why with that title alone— "Thirty-six Pieces of Leather" you could produce a best-seller.

But there are real stories about some of these pawned goods. They need no imagination at all to bring out. There is the Gysey ring. The Gysey ring, called, was brought to Nat Kaiser's place some years ago.

It is a great circle of 14-karat gold, the setting alone worth $25.00. Six months ago some woman came in with the ring and asked for $30.

She must have been a diamond that must have rivaled the Great Mogul. On one arm of the ring is engraved a name and what looks like the letter "P."

On the other appears the letter "C." The ring was called, was brought to Nat Kaiser's place some years ago.

rulers are placed near the money—windows so that a quick appraisal of a man's height is taken while he stands there.

False Teeth Valuable. The variety of articles that are pawned ceases to be such a great surprise when one remembers that for every one there is some usage. Now, a glass eye is practically worthless unless one chance in a hundred—an unfortunate has lost his and is seeking one to match.

But false teeth are worth while. Every set contains platinum wires that can be melted down and realized on. That's the reason they advance money on molars, not through hope that somebody needs a pair.

One remarkable thing that strikes the observer is the number of musical instruments in a pawn shop. It would appear that "the charms to soothe the savage breast" are not necessary to our present enlightened civilization. The lists at police headquarters are dotted thick with gramophones, violins, horns, organs, accordions, mandolins and the like.

"It's only natural, you see," says one pawnshop owner. "In the summer time we have numerous orders of gramophones and records. In the winter time they are overladen with tennis racquets, ice boxes and baseball bats."

"Music is a luxury. So we are overstocked with musical instruments. Rings and jewelry are the first to go, and shoes and other clothing last."

There is no division of the articles that are pawned. Seven-passenger touring cars are listed along with a dentist's mallet. In the list are diamond rings, a cigarette case, five-piece suits, opera glasses, fraternal charms, seventeen pieces of kitchen ware, kodaks, auto cuses.
